

Abstract:

A device for monitoring the level of a supply reservoir, in particular of a hydraulic motor vehicle brake system, comprising a float that has a magnet for actuating a switch or a sensor. The float has a multipart design comprising a first float part and a second float part and the magnet is encased and arranged between the two float parts.